Intraday Thoughts – USD/MYR Bullish

USD/MYR opened below the 4.70 handle, dipping +0.05% at 4.6900 ahead of the release of Malaysia's 3Q GDP tomorrow. The pair, nevertheless, has since rebounded to 4.7040 as of the point of writing offering tentative signs of a reversal. As such, daily outlook is bullish with tonight's US CPI being the key. The performance of this pair, will nevertheless also take cue from the result of the US mid-term election.

1-Month Outlook – USD/MYR Neutral-to-Bullish

MYR is tilted to the bearish side given prospects of sustained USD strength. Slower than expected moderation in US CPI, coupled with resiliency seen in recent data releases, are expected to support the Fed's case for continued aggressive policy normalization going forward. At its latest FOMC meeting, the Fed suggested slower pace of rate hike going forward after three consecutive 75bps hike, but Fed Chair Powell guided for higher than previously projected terminal rate. This dampened hope of a policy pivot and lifted expectations that the Fed funds rate could potentially be raised to as high as 6.00% over the next year. This shall keep the USD biddish, suppressing emerging currencies as the yield gap with the US widens.
