Intraday Thoughts – Neutral

USD/MYR opened flat at 4.7225 before trending up to 4.7248 at the point of writing. Daily outlook is neutral as we expect the pair to largely remain stable as investors hold back big bets ahead of key events, namely this week's batch of jobs data and Powell's testimony to the Congress, and on the domestic front, Bank Negara Malaysia's monetary policy decision and its accompanying statement. MYR will also be supported by recent remarks from the central bank that the Ringgit is undervalued, while USD will continue to be supported by the higher Treasury yields overnight as well as interest rate differentials between the two economies.

1-Month Outlook – USD/MYR Neutral-to-Slightly Bearish

The USD/MYR outlook is neutral-to-slightly bearish in our view, as markets shifted to when and how much the Fed will ease its policy as price prints continue to moderate. However, we expect downside to be capped given the push-backs on rate cut bets, after the CPI prints and labour data came in stronger than expected, while forward looking indicators point to solid economic activity but this does not change our view that the Fed will only start cutting rates towards mid-2024. Domestically, MYR will be supported by expectations for an extended pause in OPR, as recovery in exports, sustained domestic demand and upside risk to inflation amid imminent subsidy cuts should shield BNM from any OPR cut.
