Intraday Thoughts – Neutral-to-Slightly Bullish

USD/MYR opened 0.01% higher at 4.2463, but inched lower to 4.2457 at the point of writing, a touch below last Friday's close. Daily outlook is neutral-to-slightly bullish as the greenback is likely to trade with a bid tone given the continued escalation of Middle East tensions over the weekend. Support for the pair today is seen at 4.2375 (S1) while resistance above looks likely to kick in at 4.2596 (R1). There are no economic data releases scheduled domestically for the day ahead, with the next key release being the export and trade numbers for May this Friday, while over in the US, the regional Empire Manufacturing report out of New York state may offer an initial glimpse at the state of US manufacturing in June thus far.

1-Month Outlook – USD/MYR Neutral-to-Slightly Bearish

We prefer to stay neutral-to-slightly bearish on USD/MYR as we expect the recent Dollar weakness to have more legs to run, as lingering concerns over the outcome of the trade negotiations and its repercussions on US growth will also continue to weigh on sentiment for the greenback but that said, divergence in the policy tones between the Fed and BNM recently, namely a wait-and-see hawkish stance for the Fed and a dovish tweak for BNM, suggests a possibility of widening interest rate differential for the two policy rates, will likely cap losses for this pair. As it is, US labour market indicators remain decent for now while inflation prints have softened, giving FOMC leeway to stay the course, and potentially pushing back rate cuts to the later part of this year. With this, we are pencilling in 2 quarter point cuts in 2H for the US, but on the domestic front, the dovish tweaks in policy tone suggests odd of a 25bps OPR cut in the 2H of 2025.
