Intraday Thoughts – Neutral-to-Slightly Bullish

USD/MYR opened 0.02% higher at 4.0485 and strengthened to 4.0588 at the point of writing. Daily outlook is neutral-to-slightly bullish amid broad USD strength this morning supported haven bid and a slew of better than expected US jobs data overnight, which includes the Challenger job cuts and the initial jobless claims. Key risk today is the nonfarm payroll, where consensus is expecting gains to more than double to +70k in October from +29k previously.

1-Month Outlook – USD/MYR Neutral

We have turned neutral in this pair over a one-month horizon, with the latest run up of still resilient economic data, including domestic spending and labour market, as well as still firm energy prices which raises inflation risks, all boding well for our 4Q Fed rate hike outlook as well as stronger Dollar outlook in the near term. On the domestic front, there is also no change in our view that BNM will maintain the OPR at 2.75% this year, given BNM's firm expectations for continued resilient growth for 2026/2027 and benign price outlook, and as the central bank maintained a neutral stance in its latest policy statement, even though as it dropped the "appropriate" language paving the way for policy adjustment if need be. A tightening bias will keep Ringgit well supported in the near term in our view.
