Intraday Thoughts - Neutral

USD/MYR opened 0.02% higher at 4.1180 but made a retreat slightly to 4.1173 at the point of writing. We prefer to stay neutral for this pair ahead of key economic data on the local front, name CPI and trade numbers for May. As it is, consensus is expecting CPI to accelerate slightly to 2.1% y/y from 1.9% y/y previously, and both exports and imports are expected to remain robust with double-digit growth. Moreover, trading activities are also expected to be relatively mild with Wall Street closed for the Juneteenth public holiday and indeed, both MYR and USD remain relatively narrowly traded in early morning session.

1-Month Outlook - USD/MYR Neutral

We are neutral on this pair on expectations that investors will stay cautious, waiting for concrete developments on the geopolitical front. Meanwhile, the neutral outlook for the pair will also be supported by expectations that the FOMC will maintain rates (if not tighten) at this level in the near term given that the economy is expanding at a still solid pace, while inflation remains elevated with the latest overrun largely underpinned by energy. In our opinion, persistence fear over inflation will likely keep the Dollar well supported amid a resilient labour market, but growth concerns could likely take centre stage later in the year in anticipation of squeezed corporate profits and consumer spending following the recent run-up in energy prices. On the domestic front, BNM maintained a neutral stance in its latest policy statement, while acknowledging increased risks from the Middle-east conflict. The neutral statement, coupled with BNM’s expectation for continued moderate growth (2026: 4.0-5.0%) and benign price outlook (2026: 1.5-2.5%), reinforced our view for an extended OPR pause this year.
