Daily Market Highlights

11 Feb: All eyes on January's non-farm payroll today

Consensus expecting job gains to pick up to 65k after December's 50k gain
Soft US retail sales saw traders upping rate cut bets; UST yields & DXY fell
AUD amongst G10 laggards with RBA rate hike denting consumer sentiment

- A choppy trading session for Wall Street, with an early session rally short-lived and stifled by a sell-off in consumer staples and financial stocks, the former following the weaker-than-expected retail sales data, while appetite for the latter was dampened after tech platform Altruist launched a new AI-powered tax planning tool, raising concerns of growing AI threat to financial firms' wealth management businesses. The S&P 500 and Nasdaq slid 0.3% d/d and 0.6% d/d, but Dow rose 0.1% d/d lifted by gains in Goldman Sachs and Home Depot shares.
- Meanwhile, Tuesday was a busy day for corporate earnings in Europe. Despite a mixed slew of results, Stoxx Eur 600 closed 0.1% d/d lower. In Asia, Nikkei 225 (2.3% d/d) closed at another record high riding on Takaichi's landslide victory, while most regional bourses also closed in green. Hang Seng was up 0.6% d/d, while CSI 300 climbed 0.1% d/d.
- Treasuries surged as a weaker than expected retail sales print saw traders slightly raising odds of more Fed rate cuts this year. The benchmark 2Y yield fell 3bps to 3.45%, while the 10Y retreated 6bps to 4.14%. Save for the Norwegian bonds, 10Y European sovereign bond yields fell 2-4bps after closing mixed the previous day.
- On the FX front, the DXY dipped to as low 96.61 after the weak retail sales data, but pared its losses to close just below its flatline at 96.80. JPY (1.0% d/d to 154.39) strengthened for the second day and outperformed its G10 peers, while GBP (-0.4% d/d to 1.3643) and AUD (-0.3% d/d to 0.7075) lagged, the latter following a soft consumer sentiment reading hit by earlier RBA's hawkish hike.
- MYR strengthened 0.3% d/d to 3.9240, and led gains amongst Asian FX, while SGD appreciated 0.1% d/d to 1.2647 following the upward revision to Singapore's 4Q's GDP growth and 2026's growth forecast.
- Oil prices were steadier, edging just a tad lower between 0.4-0.6% d/d with traders waiting for signals on the US-Iran

US retail sales disappointed; contained wage-push inflation and imported prices

- Retail sales ended 2025 on a downbeat note, unexpectedly stalling in December after a robust 0.6% m/m growth the prior month. Monthly sales rose in just 5 of the 13 retail categories, led by materials and sporting goods, while clothing and electronics declined. Given the lively sales prior to December, the disappointing data could likely reflect some pull-backs after the steep discounts during the Black Friday and Cyber Monday sales in November, with added dampener from the severe winter storm, which could keep shoppers at bay.
- In other economic news, the employment cost index unexpectedly slowed to 0.7% q/q in 4Q (prior: 0.8% q/q), reinforcing Fed's view that wage push inflation is easing, while December's import prices matched expectations and grew by 0.1% m/m. Import prices were unchanged from a year ago.
- The NFIB Small Business Optimism unexpectedly fell 0.2ppts to 99.3 in January. The index at this level remained above its long-term average and signals cautiously optimistic small business owners, in a wait-and-see mode when it comes to decisions about expanding their business.

Consumer sentiment softened after RBA raised rates in February

- Mixed prints on the Aussie front. While the NAB Business Confidence index improved 1ppt to 3 in January, the Westpac Consumer Sentiment index fell at a larger pace of 2.6% m/m in February (prior: -1.7% m/m) after that RBA raised rates for the first time in more than a year. The impact remains mild at this level, but the tightening cycle could put renewed downward pressures on consumer finances and attitudes towards major purchases forward.
